PCS & Local CEO Partner to Challenge the Public to Help Raise Awareness of Mental Health Illness through Fundraising Effort

Manchester, N.H. –PCS, a local non-profit agency that offers mental health counseling to children, adolescents, families, individuals teamed up with Nick Soggu, President and CEO of Silvertech, a leading digital marketing and technology agency to raise awareness of mental health illness through a fundraising campaign. Soggu pledged to match gifts up to $5,000 during a fundraising effort which was held during the Month of May – a month designed to raise nationwide awareness of the struggles of mental illness and lessen the stigma.

"We are extremely grateful for $5,000 donation from Nick and for the generous donations from those who helped us get matching pledge," said David Reynolds D.Min., PCS Executive Director. "Nick has been very committed to this organization over the years, and we value his insight and support. All proceeds raised will help PCS increase our services by building capacity to add new staff so we can meet the increasing demand for quality services for children and families of people struggling with addictions, broken relationships, and struggling individuals. We are a valuable resource for those in need of mental health counseling; but the need of those suffering has grown in our community – but we need to match those needs with services."

"PCS has been instrumental in transforming and improving the lives of individuals in Manchester and surrounding communities," said Nick Soggu, President and CEO of Silvertech, a leading digital marketing and technology agency. "By recognizing the prevalence of mental illness in our community, PCS is in need of further support. Their counseling services are an asset to our community, offering a very necessary and important outlet to those in need." Donations can be made through PCS' secured website: http://www.pcs-nh.org/ or by calling PCS at 627.2702 x 110.
